TENNYSON'S NEW POEM. O thou so fair in summers gone. While yet thy fresh and virgin soul

Inform'd the column'd Parthenon-The glittering capitoi; So fair in southern sunshine bathed, But scarce of such majestic mien

As here with forehead vapor-swathed In meadows ever green; For thou-when Athens reign'd and Rome Thy glorious eyes were dimm'd with pain, To mark in many a freeman's home

The slave, the scourge, the chain; O follower of the vision, still In motion to the distant gleam, Howe'er blind force and brainless will May jar thy golden dream.

Who, like great nature wouldst not mar By changes all too fierce and fast This order of our human star. This heritage of the past;

O scorner of the party cry That wanders from the public good, Thou-when the nations rear on high Their idol smeared with blood, And when they roll their idol down-

Of saner worship sanely proud, Thou loather of the lawless crown As of the lawless crowd: How long thine ever growing mind

Though some of late would raise a wind To sing thee to thy grave, Men loud against all forms of power-Unfurnished brows, tempestuous tongues, Expecting all things in an hour-Brass mouths and iron lungs!

Hath still'd the blast and strewn the wave.

The Arthur Doctrine. The closing message of President Arthur's term is a document of marked ability. Partisan in only a few respects, it is wise and statesmanlike in most. He endorses, of course, the financial policy of the Popublican party and except dozen. Mongolians were interspersed to make them into 11 or 12. Why: a He endorses, of course, the financial policy of the Republican party, and, except in matter of overtaxation and the overstimulation of home industries by Protection, there are few thinking men who will deny the soundness of that policy. But the most distinctive feature of the message is the recommendation which may go into American history as the Arthur doctrine, finding a place as distinctive as the doctrine of Mary Shafer was a young German wonlace as distinctive as the doctrine of Monroe. In clearly-cut, concise language he outlines a commercial policy age. She had pleasing, but by no towards the nations of the American means hand-ome features, and was continents which is a long step in addressed in white. GEN. GRANT'S OLD FRIEND.

President Grant received the following appeal in 1873:

FLORISSANT, St. Louis Co., Mo., Oct. 6.—DEAR SIR:—Do you remember the time I used to load the wood for you on the old Dent farm? and when we bought tobacco and whisky by turns? I think you must be the same good-hearted man you was then. You are up—up in the world—and I am down, though we were once on the same round of the same ladder. Would you take it as an unwarranted liberty you take it as an unwarranted liberty if I should ask you to lend me $50? ## The Mule's Superior Intelligence

During a chat with the foreman of the street car stables, James E. Barry, the subject turned to a discussion of the characteristics of horses and mules. He has been a close student of both, and the result of his experience is that the mule is entitled to the higher rank in sagacity.

Mr. Barry went on to say that the superiority of the mule is shown in his absolute refusal to put his foot in a hole in a bridge or crossing. Horses seem to endeavor to find a hole, if there is any lying around, and break their legs. This a mule will not do, nor can he be forced to advance if he thinks there is danger. "The horse," said Mr. Barry, "has more courage, the mule more sense."

It has been an amusing study at one of the stables to watch a sly, mischiev-ous little mule that is rather too fond ous little mule that is rather too fond of liberty. It seems that the mules are fastened to their stalls by a chain, on the end of which is a crosspiece of iron, which is slipped lengthwise through a hole in the stall, and when extended crossways over the hole prevents the chain being withdrawn. This mule, when standing in his manger, with his teeth and tongue manages to slip the crosspiece attached to the chain out of the hole, and then cautiously backs out the full length of the chain and surveys the field. If there be a stableman in sight he re-enters the stall and waits desight he re-enters the stall and waits de-murely until the coast is clear, when he comes out quickly and makes a dash for liberty and the street. Sometimes it requires all hands to catch him and bring him back.

In the yard of one of the down-town stables there is a post to which four mules are generally tied after being curried. There was recently one mule there that was fond of slipping its chain-tag through the ring in the post, and then, to sllow its mates to share in its liberty, he loosened the others. This he did so often he had to be closely watched.—N. O. Times-Democrat.
